15th International Conference on MIGRATION AND DEVELOPMENT

Nova Lisboa University September 15-16, 2022

The French Development Agency (AFD) Research Department, the World Bank Development Research Group (DECRG) and the School of Economics and Business at Nova University Lisbon are jointly organizing the 15th International Conference on “Migration and Development”. The conference is devoted to investigating ways in which international migration affects economic and social change in developing countries. Possible topics include the effects of migration on poverty, inequality, and human capital formation; social networks and migration; migration and globalization; migration and institutional/technological/demographic/cultural change in sending countries, today and in the past. The plan is to have the conference fully in person, subject to the travel restrictions at the time of the conference.

A selection of papers from the conference will be considered for a special issue of Journal of Demographic Economics.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS:

Frédéric Docquier (LISER)
